Is this a glimpse inside Noah's Ark?

By David Derbyshire From: The Daily Telegraph April 29, 2010 3:42am

A member of the evangelical team examines an inside compartment of a structure believed to be the Ark / AFP

AS believers in the literal truth of the Bible, they say they always knew it was there.

Now their search may be over, for this explorer is almost certain he is standing inside Noah's Ark.

He is one of a 15-strong team of fundamentalist Christians who found seven large wooden compartments beneath snow and volcanic debris at the top of Turkey's Mt Ararat, the biblical resting place of the Ark.

"It's not 100 per cent that it is Noah's Ark but we think it is 99.9 per cent that this is it," said Yeung Wing-cheung, a filmmaker among the team.

The team said wood taken from the site, which is almost 4000m above sea level, dated to 2800BC. If it is the Ark, the discovery would be the greatest in the history of archaeology and bear out one of the Bible's most famous stories.

The team of Turkish and Chinese researchers from Noah's Ark Ministries International in Hong Kong said they made the discovery in October.

At a press conference yesterday to announce the discovery, team member Panda Lee said: "I saw a structure built with plank-like timber. Each plank was about eight inches wide. I could see tenons, proof of ancient construction predating the use of metal nails.

"We walked about 100m to another site. I could see broken wood fragments in a glacier, some 20m long."

The structure had several compartments, some with wooden beams, the team said. The wooden walls of one compartment were smooth and curved while the video shown by the explorers revealed doors, staircases and nails.

They said the wood appeared to be cypress. According to the Bible, the Ark was built from gopher wood.

The group ruled out the find as a human settlement. None had been found so high up in that area. They are keeping the exact location secret.

British archaeologist Mike Pitt said the evangelical explorers had yet to produce compelling evidence.
